

DEPRESSION AND ANXIETY

7 Coping Strategies that Work

Depression and Anxiety: What It Is And How It Affects You

WHAT IS DEPRESSION?

Depression is a very real condition. While many people think that depression is simply a state of mind and something you should just “snap out of,” it’s an illness that affects not just the mind, but the whole body.

When you’re depressed, you experience changes in eating, sleeping, the way you feel about yourself, and even the way you approach the most mundane things.

Depression is not simply feeling blue; it’s a true illness which can last weeks, months, or even years.

You may notice a variety of symptoms when you’re depressed. These symptoms vary widely from individual to individual, and they’re also dependent upon the severity of the depression.

If you’re depressed, you may experience the following:

1. Difficulty focusing or making decisions
2. Negative thought processes
3. Poor self esteem
4. Thoughts of hurting yourself
5. A lack of motivation or irritability
6. Feeling ill
7. Feelings of helplessness
8. Getting better seems hopeless

Depression and anxiety are very real illnesses that can quickly take over your life.

WHAT IS ANXIETY?

Anxiety is another very real concern that plagues many of us. While we all feel anxious from time to time, for some people, anxiety becomes a way of life for reasons unknown even to the anxious person.

Anxiety has the ability to affect our entire body and mind. When you struggle with anxiety it changes the way you feel, how you behave, and even affects your physical well being.

Anxiety is much like feeling fear, but you may not know what you're fearful or anxious about. This causes a vicious cycle of feeling anxious and then being afraid of being anxious!

Anxiety is often triggered by stress. We all encounter stress, but some of us handle it differently than others. Those who are not equipped to deal with stress effectively often struggle with anxiety.

Depression and anxiety are very real illnesses that can quickly take over your life. You may not even realize how profoundly you're being affected by depression and anxiety.

Fortunately, there are some ways in which you can take action to improve your physical and mental well being if you suffer from depression or anxiety. You can start improving your life right now!

ANXIETY MAY CAUSE YOU TO EXPERIENCE SYMPTOMS SUCH AS:

- Muscle tension
- Shaking
- Upset stomach
- "Butterflies"
- Headache
- Backache
- Rapid heart rate
- Numbness
- Increased perspiration

Actionable Strategies for Coping with Depression and Anxiety

I. TALK OPENLY ABOUT YOUR FEELINGS.

Let your doctor, family, friends, or a mental health professional know how you're feeling. Sometimes putting your feelings into words lightens the burden.

Be sure to talk to someone who will really listen.

How This Helps You:

- You will be free to express your deepest feelings without fear of judgement.
- Sharing feelings of anxiety and depression often brings some relief.
- It will give you a new perspective of your situation.

How You Can Do This:

- Ask a friend to listen.
- Join a support group.
- Make an appointment with your doctor or a therapist.

Alone we can do so little. Together we can do so much.

2. POSTPONE YOUR WORRIES.

You can often take the anxiety out of a situation if you delay the process of worrying.

This is one of the most effective strategies to help reduce excessive anxiety.

How This Helps You:

- It will help you live in the moment.
- You will realize that most worries never actually come to fruition.
- It will help you take the focus off of the things that are out of your control.

How You Can Do This:

- Tell yourself you'll think about it tomorrow, then let it go.
- Write yourself a note to take care of the issue at a specific time in the future.
- Convince yourself that you are capable of dealing with challenges as they arise.

Every great achievement was once considered impossible.

3. PUT YOUR WORRIES INTO PERSPECTIVE.

If you know what you're worried about, contemplate on how it's affecting your life. Do these things really deserve this much attention?

Often when we take a close look at what's causing us to be depressed or anxious, we realize that we're giving them too much power over us.

How This Helps You:

- It keeps things in perspective, so you can live a more balanced life.
- It helps you realize that things may not be as bad as you thought.
- It enables you to think outside of your comfort zone.

How You Can Do This:

- Make a list of all the things you're worried about.
- Ask a friend for their feedback about the items on your list.
- Join a support group where you can share your worries and also listen to those of other people. This will often give you a whole new perspective.

All things are difficult before they are easy.

4. CHANGE YOUR ROUTINE.

When we're depressed or suffering from anxiety, we often withdraw from normal activities. Unfortunately, this just gives us more time to feel worried and depressed!

Instead of continuing this pattern of withdrawal, change your routine so you won't feed your depression or anxiety.

How This Helps You:

- You will have less free time to worry.
- You will break out of your negative spiral.
- You will realize that you've been missing out on living.

How You Can Do This:

- Call a friend and ask them to go out with you.
- Join a support group or participate in a community activity.
- Force yourself to get out of the house at least once each day.

Any change, even a change for the better, is always accompanied by drawbacks and discomforts.

5. THINK POSITIVE THOUGHTS.

This coping strategy can be more powerful than you imagine! When you begin thinking positive thoughts, you'll find that your whole outlook on the world changes.

If you give into negative thoughts, your negative thoughts and worries are more likely to materialize.

Positive affirmations and meditation are effective ways to bring positive thinking into your life.

How This Helps You:

- It breaks the cycle of negative thoughts.
- It gives you the power to overcome the negative.
- It gives you a more positive and fulfilling outlook.

How You Can Do This:

- Learn to meditate.
- Use positive affirmations.
- Read books on positive thinking.

A champion is someone who gets up, even when he can't.

6. KEEP A JOURNAL.

Writing down your issues helps you to see them for what they really are so you can let them go. By writing out your deepest thoughts and feelings, you're also releasing the tension and stress from within you.

The writing process can help you come to terms with the depression and anxiety that is plaguing your life.

How This Helps You:

- It allows you to get things off your chest.
- It's a fulfilling way to express your feelings.
- It enables you to take action regarding your feelings.

How You Can Do This:

- Write in a paper journal every day when you're feeling particularly anxious.
- Create an online blog where you can share your feelings with others.
- Draw, paint, or sketch your thoughts and feelings.

Don't cry because it's over. Smile because it happened.

7. SEEK THE ADVICE OF A PROFESSIONAL.

Doctors, therapists, or life coaches are professionals who can help you treat your symptoms and underlying causes so you can get your life back.

These professionals can help you turn your life around and improve the things that could stand some improvement.

How this Helps You:

- You will gain the wisdom and experience of a professional.
- You will receive direction in living a life that's fulfilling to you.
- You will build a support system that puts your well being first.

How You Can Do This:

- Look in your local phone book for professionals specializing in depression and anxiety.
- Ask your family physician for a referral.
- Ask a friend or family member to refer you to anyone who might have helped them in the past.

True friendship brings sunshine to the shade,
and shade to the sunshine.
